Workshops & Seminars

Design for Interiors talks continued in the fall semester with Sinan Kafadar (Metex Design), Oğul Öztunç - Atıl Aggündüz (Piknik Works), and Orçun Kepez (Kadir Has University).

Dr. Gül Çanakçıoğlu Conducted a workshop under the title of "Children" with Özü students within the scope of "Yaklaş" activities organized by Özü Sustainability Platform.

Research Laboratories of the Faculty of Architecture and Design

Happy new year, I wish all of you healthy, successful days in 2020. The editorial of the last issue of ÖZÜ FAD newsletter in 2019 dedicated to the research groups of Faculty of Architecture and Design organized under the research laboratories of the faculty. The aim of this editorial text is to give short information about research groups and research laboratories of the faculty.

Prof. Dr. Orhan Hacıhasanoğlu

Urban & Housing Research Laboratory

Özü Urban & Housing Lab
RESEARCH EDUCATION PRACTICE

It is aimed to reflect and follow current information and technological developments that respond to interdisciplinary research, application and in-house requirements at national and international level based on sustainability, community benefit and environmental awareness.

In this context, Urban and Housing Research Laboratory

- Supporting education and training,
- To conduct interdisciplinary research at national and international level,
- Organizing national and international meetings,
- Organizing national and international short-term courses,

Competitions

Dynamic Research on Urban Morphology Laboratory

The DRUM (Dynamic Research on Urban Morphology) research group focuses on the diachronic aspect of urban and territorial transformations; it welcomes the expertise of Architects, Urban Planners, and Urban Morphologists including broad interdisciplinary cooperation with other disciplines such as Geography, History and Archaeology.

The research group aims to describe the dynamics of urban growth in different morphological and geographical settings by comparing a number of relevant case studies in capital cities. The research group applies the comparative method and other analytic tools, such as GIS, Space Syntax, Typological plans, Conzenian analysis at different scales and within different chronological phases to understand the past and above all, to design the future of large cities.

design for all manner of sustainable landscape at the urban and rural environment. LRL handles the determination of landscape characteristics, landscape components and elements in a holistic way. Natural, semi natural or totally manmade characteristics of landscape are the subjects of the research for future developments to promote healthy communities and challenge epistemological capacities of the subject area. LRL aims to work collaboratively to search the contemporary strategies on the relationships between natural environment and the specificities of built infrastructure via education, interdisciplinary research, and innovation for the following areas and their sub themes: Resilient Cities, Green&Blue Infrastructure, Disaster Risk Reduction, Landscape Ecology, Landscape Heritage.
